Exasperated President annoyed with media

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, announcing U.S. troops will pull out of Grenada soon, Thursday angrily rejected comparisons of America's military "liberation" of the island and the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

"Oh, for heaven's sake," an exasperated Reagan exclaimed when asked if the U.S. invasion of the tiny Caribbean island was similar to Moscow's intervention in Afghanistan.

On two other occasions during a brief session with reporters, the usually unflappable Reagan bristled at questions about what the Grenada operation means to overall U.S. foreign policy.

At one point the president testily informed the group that a U.N. vote condemning the invasion "didn't upset my breakfast." And he chided reporters for parroting Nicaraguan leaders' assertions that their nation might be next on a U.S. military hit list.

Reagan picks new head to handle Middle East

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan tapped Republican two-term congressman Donald Rumsfeld as his new Middle East envoy Thursday and pledged to "use the talents of our best minds to achieve a just and lasting peace."

Reagan reaffirmed his longstanding Middle East peace initiative in announcing the former defense secretary and White House chief of staff will be his new "point man" in a region wracked by crises and uncertainty.

"We intend to use the talents of our best minds to achieve a just and lasting peace in the Middle East," Reagan said.

Rumsfeld will take the envoy's job, for which he will get no government compensation.

Asked whether the challenge of bringing peace to the Middle East is "a no-win job," Rumsfeld replied simply, "I guess time will tell."

2 Utahns arrested on drug charge

Three men were arrested Wednesday afternoon in connection with a marijuana bust in Phoenix conducted by Utah and Arizona authorities. Alex Hunt, Gustavo Morales and Renaldo Garcia, both of Marysville, Utah, and Guillermo Keyes of Phoenix have been charged with arranging for the sale of a controlled substance, a second-degree felony.

Morales was arrested near Provo and was placed in the Utah County Jail, Hunt said. "Garcia and Keyes were arrested in Phoenix when they allegedly tried to sell 30 pounds of marijuana to an undercover agent."

According to Hunt, Morales and Keyes have been released from the Utah County Jail on a $10,000 bond and Garcia is still in custody in Phoenix.

Utah County Sheriff Dept. Dick Castro said the confiscated marijuana had been shipped to the United States from Mexico and has a street value of $70,000.

Real 'War Games' whiz submits innocent plea

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A college sophomore described as an outstanding and law-abiding student pleaded innocent Thursday to charges he used his home computer to penetrate a Pentagon operational computer network.

Bail for Ronald Austin, 19, was set at $2,000 by Municipal Court Judge Michael Tynan, who told the defendant to stay away from computers and return to court Dec. 2 for a preliminary hearing.

Austin's attorney said he expected to post bail by the end of the day.

Austin, a UCLA physics major, faces 14 counts of maliciously accessing information at universities and institutions doing research work under Department of Defense grants. He also faces single counts of theft and receiving stolen property.

The district attorney's investigative report revealed that two other people, including a juvenile, also penetrated the network and that the three sent messages to each other.

South African whites retain power in election

PRETORIA, South Africa (UPI) — White vo-

HAVANA, Cuba (UPI) — Cuba charged Thursday that American officials tried to pressure captured Cubans on Grenada to defect to the United States, telling them Fidel Castro's government refused to accept their return home.

In a separate statement, Cuban officials also accused the United States of an "escalation of provocation" by putting U.S. military forces on alert at the American Naval base of Guantanamo on Cuba's eastern tip.

A statement by the Cuban Foreign Ministry came a day after the first batch of 57 wounded Cuban prisoners, accompanied by 19 Cuban doctors, flew home on a chartered Red Cross flight.

They were greeted as heroes by Castro and top Communist Party and government officials. Some 600 other Cubans captured in the U.S. invasion still remain on the Caribbean island.

U.S. troops guarding prison camps tried to demoralize the Cubans, telling them "in Cuba no one wants to receive them, nor will they have work and offering them asylum in the United States if they desert," the statement said.

But all prisoners refused the offers of asylum, the ministry ters approved by a 2-to-1 ratio a new constitution giving limited power to non-whites but still denying political rights to South Africa's majority blacks, results showed Thursday.

The results of Wednesday's referendum showed a 66 percent approval vote from a break turnout of 76 percent of the 2.7 million registered white voters.

Lebanon peace talks closer to compromise

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Lebanon's Christian and Moslem factions reported progress Thursday on the key obstacle to agreement on peace talks — the Israeli security accord with Lebanon.

"We are closer to a compromise," a spokesman for opposition Moslem forces said after a two-hour morning session on the fourth day of reconciliation talks. "The gap has narrowed."

The accord has overshadowed the talks and U.S. diplomats fear it could deadlock or derail chances of an overall peace agreement among the factions, embroiled in almost constant civil war for eight years.

London jury deliberates over mass murder case

LONDON (UPI) — A judge Thursday completed his two-day summation in the case of a mass murderer who confessed to butchering at least 15 men, and the jury retired to consider whether he was insane or just evil.

"You will almost certainly say his mind was evil but a mind can be evil without being abnormal," Judge Powell Croom-Johnson told the jury in what has been dubbed "Hush" case.

The issue the jury had to decide was whether the 37-year-old Scotsman was guilty of murder.

The (10 Cuban) doctors evacuated also said the spirit of all the Cubans in the concentration camp — as they with all reason call them — is very high," the statement said.

Two wounded Cubans are being treated in Puerto Rico and one is still in Grenada, the government statement said. The Communist Party newspaper Granma reported Thursday the estimated 4,000 U.S. troops stationed on the American base at Guantanamo Bay have been placed on a state of alert.

The report said the United States is "pestering" Cubans by "unleashing a campaign that has all the characteristics of psychological war."

A Cuban official, who did not want to be identified, called the U.S. alert "ridiculous and absurd" because there was no justification for it.

Col. Angel Rodriguez, an Army spokesman, refused to say if the army was conducting maneuvers or were in a similar state of alert near Guantanamo.

Barker said those interviewing for positions are also asked whether or not they have attended the Utah State Police Academy or any other academy.

Attending an academy is not mandatory now, but will be in 1985.

"The academy is a 10-week course of strenuous police training," he said. "Officers are trained in criminal law as well as physical agility."

Barker said when the police academy becomes mandatory, the number of officers applying for jobs will go down, but the quality will go up.

"The Orem Police Department does not have a large turnover, but when officers do leave, about 80 percent go to other agencies and 20 percent take jobs in another field."

Job openings are published through police magazines and the newspapers, Barker said. Most of the time, qualified officers are hired this way, but occasionally another advertisement is necessary.

"About six or seven months ago, we had 20 or 30 men test for some job openings. None of the men were eligible to the extent we would have liked, so we had to put out another advertisement," Barker said.

Although new officers are treated as rookies, they are accepted quite well, Barker said. There is some minor harassment, but nothing serious.

Arraignment to start for fraud suspect

By BARBIE BATES
Staff Writer

Arraignment proceedings have begun for a Chilean businessman accused of trying to swindle more than $7 million out of the Osmond family and other Utah members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

"This appears to be another in a recent series of investment schemes in which the so-called 'Mormon Factor' has played a significant role," said Brent Ward, U.S. Attorney for Utah. "A sales pitch that has any Mormon connection at all continues to have a disarming effect upon persons who are approached to invest money," he said.

Arraignment proceedings for Jose Arturo Riffio began Wednesday morning before U.S. District Court Judge Bruce Jenkins, and Riffio was ordered held in the Salt Lake County Jail on $100,000 bond on fraud charges.

Prosecuting attorney Tina Campbell said Riffio will appear before the U.S. magistrate at 2 p.m. Monday to enter his plea. She had no further comments on the case.

A federal grand jury indictment charges Riffio with wire fraud, interstate transportation of persons for fraudulent purposes, and two other fraud-related counts.

"The indictment alleges Riffio made misrepresentations to Merrill Osmond, other members of the Osmond family, Daniel C. Hunter of Park City, and other persons to the effect that he owned an interest in a Chilean titanium mine," Ward said.

According to the indictment, told the victims he had inherited Credit Suisse, a Swiss bank, and the financial means to purchase interest in the Osmond Studies and other property owned Osmond family, Ward said.

The prosecution claims that South American men did not want that Riffio had no ownership in Credit Suisse, and that he the financial means to invest Osmond studies.

Riffio allegedly obtained $100,000 from Merrill Osmond and put the Osmond family to let him rent-free in a house they own. The indictment also states that he promissory notes from 10 Osmond and Hunter having value of $7 million.

As part of his scheme, Riffio allegedly obtained $100,000 from Merrill Osmond and put the Osmond family to let him rent-free in a house they own. The indictment also states that he promissory notes from 10 Osmond and Hunter having value of $7 million.

It is alleged that, as part of his scheme, Riffio then attempted to sell the property, and have it vest in his name.

The indictment was handed Sept. 28, but it was sealed weeks until the FBI arrested Tuesday. He faces a Nov. 7 on the indictment.

"The Osmond family has advised by their attorneys not to comment at this time," said Ron C. Spokesman for the Osmond family. "We will eventually have a statement, but because of the natural trial, the family has been advised to wait until after the trial to comment."

Orem Police to hire officers

The Orem City Police Department is in the process of interviewing and hiring three new police officers, said Police Capt. Jay Barker.

Ground breaking ceremonies for a home in Spanish Fork for mildly mentally handicapped adults will take place today at 1:30 p.m.

The Desert Village will meet the needs of mildly and marginally mentally handicapped adults, which are not currently being met, said Dr. John Staley, a professor of social work at BYU.

Mentally handicapped adults 18 years or older who are able to walk around and are capable of basic self-care skills in areas of feeding, dressing, and personal hygiene will be eligible to live at DVA, he said.

"A significant part of their handicap has been the direct consequence of social labeling," Staley said. The labels put on mentally handicapped people created a

Nobel prize winner seeks world peace

By CHRISTINE M. SMYTH
Staff Writer

For action is now, and unity has never been women to take an active role in peace, according to Nobel Peace Prize winner, Williams, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize, said in an interview Thursday. "Women need to have the power of the pen; not by dogmatic but by taking an active role in peace."

Williams and another woman, Corrigan, started a movement in Ireland that integrated Catholic and Protestant pupils. "I started with only 30 pupils — everyone was waiting for it to fail. However, there are now 300 students, with a waiting list of 500."

"For me, it has been a dream, which became a goal and an ambition, and finally turned into a reality."

When asked about the current situation in Lebanon, Williams said she believes "the Lebanon crisis cannot be solved by the United States or any other country, just as the situation in Ireland will never be solved by the British. It must be solved within the individual country."

Williams said she doesn't think she has changed much since winning the Nobel Peace Prize. "I'm still the same person; God has given me the sense to keep my feet on the ground."

"I wasn't a Nobel Prize winner when I started, but you don't have to be famous to make a difference in the world. Many people believe since I won the award that I have all the answers, but I am only working for better solutions."

Williams said her plans for the future look bright. She has recently married an American and said she loves being in America. "It is like a second home to me."

As for her future plans, she said, "I plan to always continue my peace work. I have recently spent a great deal of time writing, as well as giving lectures. I hope to write about the children of Ireland; I hope to be able to help children who have no control over war."

Organization needed

Court Justices busy

By WENDY COLLELI
Staff Writer

Lawyers and judges, although trained in the same legal practices, operate under a completely different set of allegiances and problems, Utah Supreme Court Justice Christine Durham told law students on Thursday.

Durham was named to the Utah Supreme Court in 1982 by Governor Scott Matheson.

Being named a justice to the Supreme Court was "like being struck by lightning," Durham once told attorney John O'Connor, the husband of U.S. Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor.

"It is difficult to plan for a judicial career," she told students. "You just have to be in the right place at the right time."

Durham graduated from Duke University Law School in 1971. She has taught at J. Reuben Clark Law School and the National Judicial College in Nevada, and is the vice president of the National Association of Women Judges.

"I discovered a brand new profession when I entered the judiciary," Durham said. "The judicial system focuses on a dispute/resolution process, versus the lawyer, who focuses on a particular side of a dispute and how to resolve it in the best interests of his client."

"As justices, our allegiance is not to particular individuals or a particular set of facts, but rather, it is an allegiance to the United States' judicial process," she said. A major part of the judicial branch is explaining this judicial process, Durham said.

Good weather given credit for successful deer hunt

By CRAIG WILSON
Staff Writer

Utah deer hunters had excellent weather this year and probably bagged more than many bucks last year, according to LaVar Ware, an information specialist for the Department of Wildlife Resources.

"We're hearing a lot of good stories and a few bad ones, but overall I'd say it was as good a year as we've had recently," he said.

"Our unit isn't complete yet, and we didn't have our checking station in Spanish Fork Canyon this year, but it looks like a pretty good year," said Jordan Pederson, a regional game manager in the Springville DWR office.

Usually about 30 BYU students are hired to operate a roadway checkpoint, which counts hunters and the number of deer taken, but the Thistle mudslide left Spanish Fork Canyon nearly empty of hunters, he said.

"The weather couldn't have been better for hunting, and the only problem anyone really had was poor access because of the washed-out roads," Pederson said.

Hunters were able to get up high because of the favorable weather, he said.

"For the last few years we've had storms going on right through October, and the year one hit the day before the hunt opened," said Ware. The usual problems of mud and cold were no obstacle this year, however. Ware said many hunters usually like to hunt in areas east of Thistle, but were unable to this year. "That old highway was one of the main routes to a lot of real good hunting spots, but unless you go all the way down to Duchesne and back up, you can't get to them."

He said Daniels Canyon absorbed a lot of the displaced hunters. The checkpoint there counted a record number of hunters going through.

"Later this month we're going to mail out about 30,000 questionnaires to find out just how good this year actually was," said Pederson. A second and third follow-up questionnaire usually results in a 70 to 80 percent return rate.

The pheasant hunt begins this Saturday, said Ware, and the good weather may continue. "The buffalo hunt also begins this weekend. We only give about 25 permits for that, but it's the only wild buffalo herd in the nation."

Ferguson favors two-party system

By SCOTT D. PIERCE
Staff Writer

A two-party system is vital to effective government, Mayor James E. Ferguson told a U College Democrats Thursday.

"A two-party system is missing you have had government," Ferguson said. "You end up with the leadership of the dominant party making all the decisions — not the people."

There must be challenges to the system, he said. If those in power are not opposed by those out of power, complacency and deterioration result.

Ferguson said that as mayor he has had a difficult time dealing with the Republican controlled state legislature. "I couldn't even get in to the closed caucuses. Bills were passed with no input from mayors or public discussion."

Differences between Democrats and Republicans are not as great as some people believe, he said. "We can't say that all Republicans are conservative and all Democrats are liberal."

He said it was essential citizens become involved in the political system. The choice of party is less significant than becoming involved.

Much of the trouble the Democratic Party is experiencing in Utah is the result of effective campaigns run by the Republicans, Ferguson said.

"The loyal opposition has been very successful in painting a picture of Democrats in this state," he said. "There has been a very good picture painted that you can't be a good Mormon and a Democrat."

It is the responsibility of the Democratic Party to correct this incorrect information, he added.

Once the elections are over, those elected must work together, Ferguson said. "I couldn't get anything done if I dealt with everyone on the basis of them being a Democrat or a Republican."

If the Republicans gain the governor's chair in Utah the result could be too much power in one party's hands, he said. "There's not much question in my mind that a lot of bad decisions would be made."

Although he has been mentioned as a possible candidate for lieutenant governor and Gov. Scott Matheson's running mate, Ferguson said he has never discussed the issue with Matheson.

"Count your blessings" is a new game created by former Y student Mike Agrelius. More than 25,000 games have been sold in Utah so far, and Agrelius is now selling them to stores in Southern California.

Former Y student creates popular new board game

A former BYU student has created a board game without the board in hope of starting a whole new concept of games.

Mike Agrelius, creator of two new games, is counting on the public's acceptance of a new concept in board games.

The games are printed on Tyvek playing sheets instead of traditional game boards, Agrelius said.

"The playing sheets are colorful, tear-resistant and media coated, which allows them to be wiped clean with a damp cloth," he said. "Using these sheets enables me to sell the games for less."

Agrelius has also created a whole new concept of game.

The concept of these games comes from the idea that the most important things in life can't be measured in dollars and cents, said Agrelius.

"Games that deal with money as their only criteria for winning are not true to life. These higher values are represented by blessings in my games."

Money can be accumulated in these games, but the only way to win is to get blessings, he said.

"The concept is a unique one, and it will be interesting to see if money games really do have a monopoly in the consumers' minds, or if there is room in the marketplace for games like these."

The response towards the games has been very good. People are glad there is a game with a moral behind it instead of just money, he said.

Agrelius said more than 25,000 games have been sold in Utah, and he is now marketing his games nationwide.

Winter schedule changes made

Several classes were not listed in the Winter Semester 1984 Class Schedule and one has been changed, said Deri Walker, Secondary Education student assistant.

Secondary Education 276R, Exploring Teaching, is usually offered first block of fall semester and spring term, but will not be offered Spring 1984, Walkersaid. Instead it is being offered first block of Winter 1984.

Course 276R is required to be completed before a Secondary Science Education major can apply for student teaching, she said. First priority deadline for registration is Nov. 7.

The following information is not in the class schedule: Department SC ED; Catalog number 276R, Sect. 64 for Physical Science; Index 7063, (7764 for Physical Science); Course Description Exploration Teaching Biology, (Exploring Teaching-Physics); Cr. Hr. 4; Block 1; Class period 8 to 12 p.m., taught daily; Y.T.B.A. J. Hugh Baird, instructor.

Y students study foreign culture

By SUSAN HARRIS

Staff Writer

The family and culture of the English people was studied by a group of 36 BYU students during a two-month Study Abroad program to London last May and June.

Each two-month program of Study Abroad has a main focus, said Dr. Alvin H. Price, professor of family sciences at BYU. Because he was the director for the London program and the focus was on his field of study.

Classes on children in other cultures, the family unit in other cultures, and genealogy for students to learn about past family members were offered, Price said.

Most of the students who went did their coursework from books before they left so they could use their time to study the culture while in London, he said. Each student also lived with an English family for a week during the program.

"We studied the culture and the history of the country before we went," said Leigh Anne Conklin, a junior from Napa, Calif., majoring in special education. "We had to do a lot of reading and took the tests before we went."

The students spent about three weeks in London visiting courts, government offices and museums. A university in London offered information by way of lectures on how the government of England works, the school system and the impact upon families in that country, Price said.

For another 2½ weeks, the group traveled and toured other parts of England, Scotland and Wales, he said.

"We tried to look at representative cities that represented a different time period of family cultures," Price said.

The students then split up. While one group went to Israel, the other group toured other parts of Europe for approximately 10 days. Price oversaw the Israel group.

Price said the students had to attend a certain number of plays and concerts while in London. The cost of the tickets to these events was included in the total cost of the program.

Conklin studied genealogy the majority of her stay in London. She said she went to the records to find the records of her ancestors.

"It was interesting for the who had ancestors in Scotland, Ireland, and Wales," she said.

Even though Study Abroad is expensive, the two-month program within the realm of any student compared to the six-month Study Abroad program, Price said.

Valtek parts critical to space shuttle

Control valves manufactured at Valtek will play a critical role in launching a series of space shuttle vehicles in 1985.

The control valve manufacturing firm is developing nearly 50 valves for ground support equipment in NASA's aerospace launch and test center, said Lynn Larson, Valtek contract administrator.

"Valtek's role is critical. Without the control valves, the shuttle could not get off the ground," Larson said.

"One reason Valtek was chosen to make the valves is because we have designed a unique valve specifically for the ground support system."

The valves will control the flow of gaseous nitrogen, oxygen, helium and liquid oxygen to power the shuttle's engines, he said.

The shuttle launching will take place from Vandenberg Air Force Base in California.

The valves are being made to fit all ground support equipment being used at Vandenberg, he said.

"The ground support system at Vandenberg will be used to inspect, service and repair the shuttle orbiter, the solid rocket boosters and each of their subsystems between flights," Larson said.

Computer disc devised to aid language study

By JEAN ESPLIN

Staff Writer

Imagine a student being able to sit down at a computer terminal to do his foreign language homework.

A video disc is inserted and a movie in the language is shown. Any time the student has a question, the movie can be stopped. He can ask the computer a question, or rerun the movie to review. After his question has been clarified, he can go on with the movie.

The student is working on an individualized interactive courseware program developed by the universities involved in the Computer Aided Language Learning and Instruction Consortium, or CALICO, based at BYU.

As well as developing programs like this individualized one, the CALICO program is devised to help anyone interested in high technology learning of language to work with others and have access to research being done throughout the country through their data base, according to Frank Otto, a professor in the Department of Linguistics and executive director of CALICO.

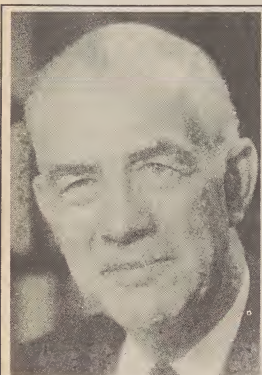

Any subscriber to the data base can, for a small charge, call or write CALICO and ask for any information available on computer-assisted learning.

There are four ways they can receive the information: through a computer print-out, a microfiche, a computer disc, or a telephone modem, in which the two computers are hooked up by telephone so that any information in CALICO's computer is automatically available to the other computer, he said.

Members of the organization develop programs to aid students in learning languages by the use of computer. They are presently working on programs involving individualized instruction and video disc — such as those using the interactive coursewares, Otto said.

The programs involving the individualized instruction are on a video disc and enable students to stop the movie, ask the computer questions, answer questions it asks, rerun portions of the movie and review until they understand the concepts involved in the program.

There are about 350 universities, 50 vendors — large corporations who use this type of information — several state and federal agencies, and numerous individuals who are members of the consortium, he said.

Elder Mark E. Petersen, a member of the Council of Twelve of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, was hospitalized Monday for a kidney ailment.

Church spokesman Jerry Cahill said Elder Petersen was admitted to the Cottonwood Hospital Medical Center in Murray where he is responding well to treatment.

Elder Petersen, 83, was in stable and improving condition Thursday afternoon.

Jackson announces presidential candidacy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Black civil rights activist Jesse Jackson, pledging to lead a "rainbow coalition" in "a quest for a just society and peaceful world," Thursday became the eighth candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Jackson, 42, said he is not running as a black candidate, but is forging a "rainbow coalition" of the rejected that will include whites, blacks, Hispanics, Indians, Asians, women, young people, poor people, old people, gay people, laborers, small farmers, small businesspersons, peace activists and environmentalists.

"I seek the presidency because I want to affirm my belief that leadership is colorless and genderless, and that the sole hallmark of a true leader is not the skin color he or she received from God, but the ability of the person to bring competence, compassion and fairness," he said.

Editors make picks

By TONY RAU
and SCOTT TAYLOR
Sports Editors

All the Western Athletic Conference teams are in action this week with the exception of San Diego State. Two WAC teams — CSU and Utah — will face off against non-conference foes.

WAC games
HAWAII at AIR FORCE: The Rainbow Warriors travel to the mainland to take on the 6-2 Falcons, who have serious thoughts about a second consecutive bowl appearance. Both Tony and Scott look for Air Force to win by 13 points.

WYOMING at NEW MEXICO: The well-rested Cowboys will take on the frustrated Lobos, who dropped a 25-24 decision last week to CSU. Tony picks the Cowboys to win by a field goal, Scott goes with the home team by 10.

NORTHERN COLORADO at COLORADO STATE: This will be the first meeting between the two neighbors since CSU won 48-10 in 1977. Tony projects a 24-point winning margin for the Rams; Scott picks the Rams by 20.

FULLERTON at UTAH: The Utes will face the NCAA leader after having last week off. Tony picks the Utes to win by 10 points; Scott projects a nine-point Utah victory. BYU (12) at TEXAS-EL PASO: The Cougars have dominated this contest in the past and should do so again this year. Tony looks for a 55-7 BYU win; Scott expects a 60-10 rout.

Other games

MARYLAND (7) at AUBURN (3): Tony picks the Tigers by a touchdown; Scott likes the home team by a field goal.

OKLAHOMA (11) at MISSOURI: Tony picks an upset and goes with the home team (by a field goal); Scott looks for the Sooners to win by two touchdowns.

NOTRE DAME (18) at PITTSBURGH (19): Tony picks the Panthers to win by a field goal; Scott goes with the visitors by a touchdown.

TEXAS (3) at HOUSTON: Both Tony and Scott pick the Longhorns in a 20-point victory.

IOWA STATE at NEBRASKA (1): Tony projects a 14-point touchdown Nebraska win; Scott picks the Cornhuskers by 30.

CLEMSON at NORTH CAROLINA (9): Tony looks for the Tar Heels to rebound and win by 10; Scott goes for the upset and picks Clemson by two points.

GEORGIA (4) at FLORIDA (10): Tony expects the Bulldogs to take the Gators by a field goal; Scott looks for a four-point Georgia win.

EAST CAROLINA at MIAMI (5): Both Tony and Scott look for the Hurricanes to win by 10.

PURDUE at MICHIGAN (16): Tony looks for the Wolverines to win by three TDs; Scott looks for a 14-point Michigan margin.

ILLINOIS (6) at MINNESOTA: Both Tony and Scott expect the Illini to win by four touchdowns.

WASHINGTON at ARIZONA: Tony goes with Arizona in a seven-point win; Scott expects the Huskies to win by six.

LSU at ALABAMA (17): Tony picks the Crimson Tide by 14 points; Scott goes with LSU in a three-point upset.

Results

Last week: Tony picked 11 out of 13 games correctly, missing the Maryland win over North Carolina and the Illinois victory over Michigan. Scott missed only the Miami win at home against West Virginia. Overall: Scott has picked 67 of 91 games (74 percent); Tony has correctly projected 64 of 91 games (70 percent).

Change destiny, drop USU

Editor:

It is about time for BYU to change its destiny and end its so-called rivalry with Utah State University.

Let us just list the benefits of playing USU:

- possibility of seriously injuring a Heisman Trophy candidate
- Gordon Hudson out for the rest of the season
- Mike Eddo out for the rest of the season
- Carey Whittingham's broken hand
- loss of national recognition
- some old dusty wagon wheel.

Is it worth playing USU for the benefits just listed? I believe you would be hard pressed to find a majority of students at BYU who agree to keep them on our schedule.

I wouldn't doubt that you could find statistical evidence to show that injuries are more frequent to a team or player when they are not emotionally keyed up for a game. Some would argue that it's always such a thrilling game. Well, I don't get excited when we lose players the caliber of Hudson or Eddo.

If it's possible, I would like to see a poll taken amongst the BYU community: "Should BYU drop USU from its schedule to open a spot for a team from the Big 10, the Big Eight, the ACC, the SEC, . . . ?"

I do believe you would find the results very interesting.

Stan Trout

Denver, Colo.

Nelson Kovig

Blackfoot, Idaho

While some might question the essential nature of continuing the BYU-USU rivalry, injuries are possible each game. That's part of the risk involved in football. When BYU played Colorado two years ago in Boulder, the Cougars suffered various injuries to at least a half-dozen players, including honors candidates Jim McMahon and Bart Oates.

The better athletic teams have to win against all opponents, whether they be underdogs or heavy favorites. An example of that is the Ralph Sampson-led Virginia basketball team losing to tiny Chaminade of Hawaii.

Perhaps part of fans' reluctance to see BYU continue competing against Utah State is our recent record against the Aggies. Three of BYU's most closely battled gridiron games in the past three years have been the USU contests, with the Aggies winning last year's matchup in Logan and falling to the Cougars in the closing moments of the last two games played in Provo. And the basketball team has dropped three straight to Utah State.

Ken Shirley

also be created: The Roberto Duran "No Mas" Trophy could be given annually to the coach who throws in the towel earliest in a contest. At times Doug Seay would be a prime candidate for the award. Being an adamant opponent of running up the score, Doug could use the device often and probably would have done just that in the year's BYU-SDSU contest after the Cougars had gone ahead 7-6 in the first quarter, thus preventing the Cougars from satisfying their bloodthirsty lust for points and total yards at the expense of the porous Aztec defense.

The knocout has worked for years to protect undermanned pupils and could work equally as well to avoid gridiron embarrassment and stop the now-wearisome opposing coaches' lament that BYU has run up the score.

Eugene, Ore.

If that were to be the case, BYU ought to feel relieved that the Cougars didn't get a fourth-quarter towel brown in Holiday Bowl III after falling behind to SMU 45-21.

Beehive tourney begins

Soccercats face ISU

The BYU soccer team concludes regular season play this weekend in the Beehive Invitational Soccer Tournament, to be played in Provo.

Other teams participating in the tournament include Utah, Utah State, Weber State, Southern Utah State, Idaho State and Utah Technical College.

Opening round matches begin Friday at 5 p.m. when BYU's junior varsity team faces Southern Utah State on Haws Field. The varsity team will take over at 7 p.m. against Idaho State.

The winners of Friday's contests will play at 10 a.m. on Saturday with the losers competing at noon. The championship game will take place at 4 p.m.

BYU Head Coach Jim Dursara said the tournament has been a tradition in Utah for the past five years. The championship has gone to BYU four of those years and Dursara expects the crown to stay in Provo after this weekend.

The Soccercats, coming off last week's 3-0 win over British Columbia, hope to improve on their 9-9-2 record.

"Soccer is a game where you can get beat at any time," said Dursara. "We can't brag about our UBC victory. We've got to play well this weekend."

The game will be the last in a Soccercat uniform for Scott Snelson and Guillermo Padilla, the two seniors on BYU's team. According to Dursara, Snelson has led the offense this year while Padilla has anchored the defensive play.

"We're ready," added Dursara. "Our physical shape and conditioning is much better than early in the year."

Dursara said the young team has improved and he wishes the team could replay the nationally ranked teams they lost to early in the season.

"We're more ready for them now," he said.

Hudson suffered fracture

The knee injury to BYU tight end Gordon Hudson from Saturday's Cougar-Aggie game could be more serious than first imagined. Along with the tearing of ligaments and cartilage damage, Hudson also suffered an avulsion fracture on the lateral side of the same leg.

An avulsion fracture results when part of the bone breaks off. "We don't know if it's new or old," said BYU trainer Mary Robertson of the fracture.

As of Wednesday, Hudson was running on the damaged limb and also riding a bicycle for therapy, Robertson said.

When Robertson was asked how the All-American tight end was doing, he said, "He's doing fine." But the BYU trainer declined to project a date when Hudson would be available for action, saying "We're just going to take it a week at a time."

According to Robertson, the fracture shouldn't complicate the other injuries that Hudson has suffered because it's on the lateral side of his leg and the other injuries were on the medial side.

Intramurals announces champs, run

The intramurals program has had its hands full with the outdoor soccer championships being wrapped up recently and preparing for the upcoming Turkey Trot to be held on Nov. 17. The new soccer champions for Division 2A is the Exhakes, while the Dizzabusters clinched the 4A title. Overall, 40 teams competed in the tournament.

Time is approaching for those interested to test their skills in the Turkey Trot, a mini-marathon in which contestants guess their possible times on a run of about 3.5 miles. Those with times closest to their guesses are awarded a turkey.

No entries are required in this competition in which there are men's and women's divisions for students, faculty and track team.

The race will begin at 4 p.m. in the quad between the Richards Building and the Smith Fieldhouse, with registration at 3:30 p.m.

Y ruggers set to battle Snake River

BYU's rugby team will battle an Idaho Snake River team this Saturday in Caldwell, Idaho.

Last year, Snake River was the only team to beat BYU in the fall half of the season.

The Cougars are coming off a 24-13 win over a Utah State team that saw many of the BYU ruggers put points on the board. Mark Ormsby led all scorers with 16 points. He made five of six kicks and also scored a touchdown.

Jazz set to honor 3 former Cougars in next few weeks

Former BYU basketball player Fred Roberts will return home Saturday when the Utah Jazz play the San Antonio Spurs at 7:30 p.m. in the Palace.

Roberts has impressed the San Antonio Spurs hierarchy. A Spurs spokesperson said, "He is really a Mo's (San Antonio Head Coach Morris Marshall) confidence and is one of the first players' bench."

Roberts seems happy with his role on the team. "I know my job is to play defense and rebound, and if I score some points, too, well all the better."

The former Cougar will be honored at halftime Saturday's game. He is one of three former collegians who will be honored during the Jazz three home games.

Justice turns English down

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tulane quarterback Jon English was turned down Thursday for the fourth time in his attempt to get back into the starting lineup. Supreme Court Justice Byron White refused to order the NCAA to let him play.

White, a former running back and member of the National Football Hall of Fame, refused to overturn an NCAA ruling that English is ineligible to play.

For Students Go On Sale Saturday, Nov. 5!

Student tickets for the first seven basketball games of the season go on sale Saturday, November 5, at the Marriott Center. Because several of the games will be played while school is not in session, or while many students will be studying for finals, a new distribution policy has been established that will let you buy tickets to all or some of the games.

The doors of the Marriott Center will open Saturday morning from 6 a.m. to 8 a.m. As you enter, your activity card will be checked. Spouse cards must be accompanied by a full-time student card. You will not be allowed to purchase tickets with someone else's card.

After your card is checked, you will be given a random number that will determine the order in which you may purchase tickets. Being first in line will not help you get better seats. Everything is random. After you get a number, you will be asked to go inside the Marriott Center and take a seat.

Numbers will be called beginning at 8 a.m. and you will be asked to proceed to point where you can purchase tickets. You may purchase anywhere from one to tokens, depending on the number of games you plan to attend. Each token costs $1.00 and can be exchanged for a ticket to any game. There is a limit, however, of two tokens per game per person.

You will then take the tokens to the ticket distribution area, where you can exchange tokens for tickets to the games you want to attend. A TOKEN WILL NOT SERVE AS A GAME TICKET. IT MUST BE EXCHANGED FOR AN ACTUAL STUDENT TICKET.

Tickets will remain on sale at the Marriott Center until 5 p.m. Saturday. There are 6,700 tickets allotted to students this year.

Please look closely at your schedule to determine the number of games you can attend. When you come Saturday, know the number of tickets you will be purchasing and the distribution will go much more quickly.

DAILY UNIVERSE SKI SECTION

Utah's snow is claim to fame

By WENDY COLLELI
Staff Writer

According to some skiers, Brigham Young was right about a few things when he came through the mountains of Utah and declared, "This is the place."

Utah ski resorts' No. 1 claim to fame is their light powder snow. Danny Richardson, director of the Utah Ski Association said that Utah's snow is "known around the world as the greatest snow on earth."

"The snow is lighter and drier here and not only provides excellent powder skiing, but also packs better," he said.

Mark Comoletti, a former ski instructor and pro racer from Big Bear Lake, Calif., agreed, saying Utah's powder has become nationally famous. Utah has gained such a reputation that the current trend has become "if you don't go to Utah, you're not a skier," Comoletti said.

An All-American member of the BYU Alpine Ski Team, Bill Schenker, also commented on Utah's powder. "The main difference between Utah and Northern California, for instance, is the type of snow," he said.

"You might get two days out of the year of light powder at Squaw Valley, whereas at Alta or Snowbird the powder is consistently good."

The high quality of Utah snow was echoed by team member Mark Wheadon from Provo, who emphasized the superiority of the depth and type of Utah's snow.

Another advantage to skiers is the accessibility and variety of the ski resorts and slopes available in Utah. Snowbird, Deer Valley, Park City and Alta, all 45 minutes from Salt Lake International Airport, each cater to different types of skiers and various skill levels.

"Utah offers a full range of skiing terrain within a relatively small distance, plus, there is the advantage of having a major city close by," Richardson said.

Schenker said as far as accessibility, there is probably nothing better in the United States than Utah. He recounted the story of a skier he rode the chair with at Park City, who had left the Chicago suburbs around 6:30 a.m. and was on Utah's slopes by 1:30 p.m. the same day.

Not only is Utah the possessor of a broad spectrum of slopes, but these are also "some of the most challenging of any in the United States," said Ford L. Stevenson, the coach of BYU's Alpine Ski Team, who has also skied in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Colorado.

Robert Proctor, a freestyle skier who is competing in nationals at Winter Park this year, said he thinks Utah's runs are as tough as those he has skied in Idaho and Wyoming.

Comoletti, although he agreed that Utah has some comparatively difficult slopes, said that Mammoth and Kirkwood in California, are, as a whole, more difficult.

The cost of skiing in Utah helps to lure skiers from all over the country. The average cost of a single adult all-day lift ticket in Northern California is $21. In Southern California, around Snow Summit, the average cost is $20. Back East in the New York, Vermont, New Hampshire area, although the average cost is only about $16, there are fewer runs, less variability of terrain and the snow conditions are often icy or slushy.

"Utah is horribly reasonable," said Stevenson. "The average lift ticket in Colorado is about $22. In Utah, it's around $15, excluding Park City and Deer Valley."

Schenker said he read in a ski magazine that Alta is the cheapest major ski area in the United States. "Alta is the best ski bargain and the skiing is right up there with Snowbird," he said.

Although Utah seems to be "the place" for skiing, there have been a few problems. A direct result of the much-acclaimed powder is an abundance of avalanche problems, Stevenson said.

Another disadvantage out-of-state skiers sometimes associate with Utah skiing is the lack of after-dark social activities. Other major ski towns are known for their bustling night life, while Utah seems to close its doors early and have limited social facilities.

Wheadon said one of the reasons he prefers skiing at Sun Valley, Idaho, is because it has a nice atmosphere and much more to do at night.

Despite these shortcomings, skiers seem to be flocking to Utah to sample the unparalleled snow and the extensive variety of skiing terrain.

"If you don't go to Utah, you're not a skier."

— Mark Comoletti

Contagious fever to hit Y students this month

By MYA FORSTROM
Staff Writer

A contagious disease will strike many BYU students this year in the early weeks of November.

Many of the students will contract this disease and will suffer from it until the end of April. The disease, best known as ski fever, affects a major part of the student body on the BYU campus as soon as winter hits the air.

The true ski bums get ski fever right around Thanksgiving, said Craig Roberts, a junior from Park City majoring in accounting.

During the middle of November, ski bums pull out their skis for filing and waxing. Since they usually have several pairs, they are kept occupied for a while, Roberts said.

Then they wait for the first resort to open. Skiing starts around Thanksgiving and the season lasts until May, or as long as the snow stays, he said.

Every night the typical ski bum can be found watching the weather report, even though he knows they are wrong 80 percent of the time, Roberts said. "They always overpredict snow conditions."

The amount of snow doesn't really matter to a skier who follows the runs. "After there is a good base and the rocks are covered, it's fine," he said.

However, if a person is an avid powder skier, the amount of snow makes a big difference. "There is nothing better than four feet of new powder. Nothing compares to Utah powder," he said. "You feel like you're in heaven."

Roberts started skiing when he was five years old and has been doing it for 17 years. His parents taught him the basics, but as he got older he had help from instructors.

"You don't need an instructor in the beginning if you have someone to help you, but after you reach a certain point only an instructor can help you improve," he said.

Living in Park City for the past six years has given him the opportunity to improve. Every afternoon half of the high school students would be on the slopes.

"There were a lot of excellent skiers, and you could always find someone who would push you to be your best," he said. "The best way to improve is to ski with someone who is better than you."

Roberts joined the BYU ski team, but decided to quit because it took up too much time. "I realized why I was here and decided to devote more time to school," he said.

Roberts loves to ski just for fun. Every year he and his roommates travel on an extended weekend to another state to ski a different resort. They have been to Idaho and Wyoming, and this year they are planning a trip to Colorado.

Roberts said he likes a challenge when skiing. Last year he and a bunch of friends hiked up Mt. Timpanogos with their boots and skis and skied down.

"Most people don't ski Timpanogos. We did it just for the fun of it and because it was a challenge," he said. "It was an all-day adventure."

One guy hurt his knee doing a flip off a 30-foot jump, but everyone made it down without any serious injuries.

After 17 years of skiing Roberts has never been seriously injured, he said. "I've had a lot of outrageous accidents, but I've always walked away unharmed."

The key to not getting hurt is to have the right equipment and have the bindings adjusted properly, he said. "Make sure your bindings are adjusted by a certified technician."

Alan Mowry, a junior from Valley Center, Calif., majoring in economics, practices jumping off the bridge in front of the Wilkinson Center. Ski fever, indeed.

Y Ski Team preparing now

Bill Schenker and 13 members of the BYU Ski Team will be going for the national championships again this year after winning them last season. About 50 students tried out for the 14 slots on the ski team.

Although there is a recruiting program, there are enough interested skiers that Coach Ford Stevenson doesn't need to worry about attracting students to BYU's team.

Fantasies of the ski slopes will soon become a reality

By ERIC ZEBLEY
Ski Editor

It's the time of year when the baseball gloves and tennis rackets get stowed away. The trees are bare and white has blanketed the mountains. It's the ski season and fantasies of the experience are brought to mind.

Excitement mounts and the reality of shutting down the mountain and etching a path on untouched snow warms the blood though the air is chilling.

The lift climbs between the trees and a feeling of solitude hovers around. The surrounding snow fall from the trees, too much weight for the branches. After enjoying a quiet five to ten minutes on the lift, the peak is reached.

Deposited safely at the top, the adrenaline flows quickly enough to remove any lethargy or fatigue that may have been experienced earlier in the day. At the mountain's top the view is breathtaking; the visual pleasures of skiing are among the great rewards of the sport. The panorama unfolding from the peaks reveals beautiful scenery in all compass directions.

Looking down the slope, ideas of how to conquer the run challenge the mind. The thought of never reaching the bottom and having the run come to a close creates excitement, it is only wished it was true.

With a stretch and retighting of the ski boots, descent is begun. The skis slicing through the snow, wind blowing on the face, the joy of the outdoors, and the bite of the weather, are all better in reality, even when compared to fantasy.

When paralleling back and forth, jumping moguls, weaving between trees with the powder flying, it is not known what to expect next as the descent continues.

It all ends too soon though. It's amazing that something so simple as sliding back and forth on snow can provide such satisfaction and pleasure.

After completing the last run there is a feeling of fulfillment but not complete satisfaction. As the skis are flung over the shoulder and with a last look up the mountain, it is realized there is always tomorrow, and another day to make the fantasy a reality.

Rigorous training program

The leaves are just beginning to fall off the trees, but the members of the BYU Ski Team have already been named and are now involved in a rigorous training program.

Ford Stevenson, BYU Ski Team coach, said this year there has been an increased interest associated with being a member of the ski team.

14 slots
"We had 50 kids trying out for 14 slots. Part of this had to do with winning the National Championship last year," he said.

Members of the men's ski team include Bill Schenker, Gary Palmer, Mark Taft, Mark Wheaden, Dale Rowley, Tim Murray and Jeff Summerson.

Stevenson said he is not sure whether or not award-winning Troy McCray would return this year.

Troy got married over the summer, so he may pursue other things. He is not training for the 1984 Olympics, although he is an elite crowd of skiers. Troy is one of the top 100 skiers in the U.S. Stevenson added he hoped McCray would return to the BYU team.

The women's ski team includes Trish O'Brien, Heidi Hoffman, Wendy Gibbs and Jo Nyman. Stevenson said there will be some additions to the women's team.

"We are waiting until the snow falls to hold some tryouts. Three more women will be added to the team."

Most of the skiers start skiing with the team when they are freshmen. Stevenson said although there is a recruiting program, the skiers join the team because of a love for skiing.

Scholarships

"The money our team uses towards scholarships is purely from our own fund raisers. The university gives us no money for scholarships."

"The ski swap is a fund raiser we began last year. It is scheduled to be held Nov. 18 from 2 p.m. until 9 p.m. and Nov. 19 from 8 a.m. until 9 p.m. The ski swap will be held in 133 RB both days."

The proceeds from the swap will go to the ski team and will be used to buy new timing equipment and slalom folds.

Although skiing is an expensive sport, Stevenson said some of the equipment cost is absorbed by the university and ski equipment manufacturers.

"The team's parkas and sweaters are supplied by the university. About 50 percent of the team is given their ski equipment by manufacturers. It is good advertising for the manufacturers and it's good for the team."

Unlike many teams, the ski team participates in year-round training.

"During the dry weather, the team participates in dry land training. They work together on Monday, Wednesday and Friday for two hours a day. On Tuesday and Thursday, team members work on an individual basis weight lifting and doing stretching exercises. Good skiers are the best conditioned athletes in the world," he said.

Video taped

The ski team uses video taping as a part of their training program.

"We review the tapes and identify the technical problems as well as the strengths. The coaches and skiers talk together and review the skier's technique. Most of the time, the skiers immediately identify what they need to work on. The video is better than any coach," Stevenson said.

Although the BYU Ski Team won the National Championship last year, Stevenson said he never has any expectations of winning.

"I don't believe in putting pressure on the kids. I have high aspirations and think this year's team will place high, but skiing is an individualistic sport."

"When it is time for the team to compete, I remind them they have the ability to live up to the goals they have chosen."

Both styles included in ski club

The BYU Ski Club is two clubs, according to David LeDuc, club president.

The club sponsors both downhill and cross-country skiing. "We have many people who are interested in both."

The ski club exists to provide a place for people to be interested. "We're open to anyone interested. We don't care if you are an expert skier or never been on skis before."

Dues for cross-country are $10 a year and $20 a year for downhill.

Last year the club had more than 300 members. LeDuc hopes to see a similar level of interest this year.

The ski club plans trips to ski throughout Utah during the year. Through affiliation with the National Collegiate Ski Association, members receive discounts on lift tickets.

Although the club does not provide formal ski lessons, LeDuc says members have the opportunity to learn. "Part of skiing with the club is that you learn from other people."

Cross country skiing is a fast growing sport

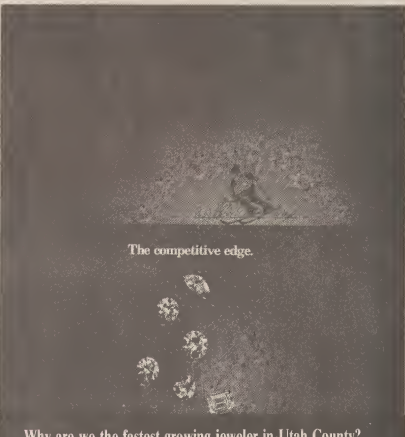

If this is the year you've decided to try cross-country skiing — one of the fastest growing winter sports, experts suggest a few basic guidelines to help you glide over the snow rather than plop into it.

Perhaps most important, take a few lessons. There's nothing worse, they say, than watching a potential skier give up in frustration after ungracefully falling into the snow without even knowing how to get back up.

One of the worst things that ever happened to cross-country skiing was the slogan, "If you can walk you can ski," said Tom Kelly of Telemark Lodge.

"Cross-country skiing is easy — but after you've learned the basics," Kelly said. "You're going to enjoy cross-country so much more after a few lessons than that 'hey! pay for themselves many times over.'"

Telemark sponsors the annual 55-km Birkebeiner which has grown from 54 participants in 1973 to the largest ski event in North America.

The competitive edge.

Why are we the fastest growing jeweler in Utah County?

Because no one has more depth in diamond and ring selection. Your diamond can also be set while you wait.

"We will not be undersold."

U.S. team ever

Olympic skiers ready

By RUTH TERRI
Staff Writer

Alpine and Nordic ski teams are counting on the 1984 Winter Olympics in Sarajevo, running from Feb. 8 to 19.

The last Olympic flame was extinguished at the 1976 Winter Games in Innsbruck, Austria. American skiers have claimed 10 World Cup titles and nine discipline medals.

That will represent the United States at the Games may well be the strongest American contingent in history, according to Valerie, president of the U.S. Ski Education.

Alpine and Nordic teams are entering the year-round training in preparation for the Games," said U.S. Alpine Director from his office in Park City, administrators for the U.S. Ski Team.

Competitive training for the U.S. team will start this month with the World Cup. We will enter the Games with a team that has the potential for greatness, and if the past few years are any indication, we have a number of skiers who are capable of medal performance.

Hopefuls from the alpine team include champion Phil Mahre, 28, of Yakima, his twin brother Steve, the reigning slalom champion, Marolt said. Alpine hopefuls for the 1984 Games are Timmy, 21, of Lexington, Ky., who captured overall World Cup title for an American, and veteran Cindy Nelson, 27, of Park City, who experienced one of the best careers with the posting of her seventh World Cup victory this year.

Now team, which includes cross-country and ski jumpers, has a combined 11 members.

Only 26 Nordic skiers to the Olympic Program Director Jim Page. Nine skiers were required to complete 40 snow skiing before Nov. 1. They did so in the North American and European Championships.

Page said the men's cross-country team is the best in the world. World Cup champion Bill Koch, 28, of Park City, and Tim Caldwell, 29, of Putney, Vt., are the top contenders.

female contender at the Games will be Judy Endestad, 25, of Fairbanks, Ala.

Page said she is the lone member of the women's cross-country team and was the top U.S. female finisher on the World Cup circuit in 1983.

The U.S. Ski Jumping squad is led by the duo of Jeff Hastings, 23, of Norwich, Vt., and Mike Holland, 21, also of Norwich.

"We have developed strength and depth in the Nordic areas to be contenders this year," Page said reflecting on the team's success during the past three years.

"It should be our greatest Olympic year ever."

'Outdoors' shop offers ski advice for cross-country

By KEITH TROUT
Staff Writer

To experience nature and the quiet solitude of a snow-covered forest, cross country skiing may be the ideal activity.

For the best results cross country skiing has to offer, the right location and clothes are important. Terrain and avalanche danger need to be considered when choosing a spot to cross-country ski. Dave Webb, manager of Outdoors Unlimited and former cross country ski instructor, said.

One of the best spots in this area is Fairview Canyon, near Fairview, Utah, Webb said. Big and Little Cottonwood Canyons, the Park City area, Park West and the Deer Valley area of the Wasatch range are also good areas.

Avalanche areas

Avalanche areas can be deceiving, Webb said. An area may appear safe because it is flat, but an avalanche slides from the top to the bottom and moves quite rapidly with lots of snow by the time it reaches the bottom. Canyon areas are potentially dangerous in this manner.

Advantages of Fairview are the low susceptibility to avalanches, thousands of seldom-used acres and a terrain that is excellent for cross-country skiing.

Fairview Canyon has a varied terrain — flat areas, mild slopes and steep hills — "something for everybody," beginner to advanced, Webb said.

"The number one rule" in dressing for cross-country skiing, Webb said, is to avoid cotton. Cotton insulates skin when dry, but when wet gives off four times the amount of heat it retains.

Durable materials

Good materials to wear are synthetics, nylon, rayon or orlon. They are durable, do not get wet as easily, do not retain water nor do they lose as much heat, Webb said.

Wool and polypropylene are the best fabrics to wear, Webb said. Wool retains heat even when wet. Polypropylene retains one percent its weight in water, while wool retains 30 percent.

When dressing for the sport cross country skiers should consider four factors. First, outer clothing should serve as a wind and water resistant shell that insulates well and gets less wet.

Second, insulate by wearing wool, polypropylene or down.

Third, wear underneath material that has an inherent ability to eliminate moisture, Webb said.

The general rule is to dress in layers, several light layers of clothing are better than one bulky piece of clothing. Many layers allow moisture to pass from one layer to another. Heavy clothing becomes saturated when wet and takes longer to dry, Webb said.

With many layers, the amount of insulation can be adjusted, depending on activity level and temperature. For example, if a person is skiing strenuously, he needs little insulation, but once he stops and his body temperature drops, he will need more.

The situation with a cross-country skier is unique from that of a downhill skier. The Nordic skier is his own ski patrol, ski instructor, paramedic and parking lot attendant, Webb said.

Cross-country skiers frequently enter potentially dangerous situations, but with skill and knowledge a safe activity can be enjoyed. Preparation is the prerequisite fun.

Many items are needed to be adequately prepared for a cross-country ski. A shovel, ski repair kit, first aid kit, food are some of the items a cross-country skier should bring along, Webb said.

Brighton Solitude

3 Season Pass Choices & No Price Increases

For the sixth year, Solitude and Brighton will sell a limited number of Big Cottonwood season passes that allow unlimited skiing at both areas all season long including night skiing at Brighton. With the new Summit lift, pass holders will be able to interchange between areas using the lift served Solitude trail. For skiers preferring to ski at only one of the resorts, separate passes for Brighton or Solitude are also available. All three passes are at the same price as last season.

If you are planning to ski more than 15-18 times, it is smart to purchase a season pass. The quantities are limited so don't wait.

1-piece suit, layered look new ski fashions for '83-84

Sporting good stores are agreeing that there are basically two new fashion trends for the 1983-84 ski season.

One new look really coming in this year is the light layered look, Sharyn Hall, fashion coordinator for a local ski resort store said. It is putting a lot of light fabrics over a sweater, mostly for convenience, she said. "Skiers can be comfortable, because they don't have a lot of weight on their backs, and they can shed the layers as the day goes by," she said.

Another new look coming in this year is the one piece ski suit, Hall continued. "We always carry one piece suits, but this year they really seem to have caught on."

A lot of new materials are also being used this year, Becky Rucker, the fashion coordinator for a Provo sporting goods store said. Quaprel is a new fabric that is a lot cheaper and has the same look, but feels even softer than the regular fabrics, she said.

The colors for this season are going to be pretty dull, Kirk Jacobson, the fashion coordinator for a local department store said. Navies, burgandies, browns and blacks are really going to be popular, he said.

Rucker said the colors will be muted tones, and not so loud. "For example," she said, "a suit could be black with a red pin strip, but the red would be soft and toned down."

Rucker said powdered ski jackets are not as popular as they have been in the past, but they are still selling pretty strong.

Hall said the nordic look is also coming in. She said it is a break off from the cross country skiers clothing, with imported hand knit sweaters.

Rucker said the Nordick look for her store depends on the skiers tastes. "The sweaters we are selling the most, however, are those with the smaller designs, instead of the thick shetland sweater look."

Utah skiing excellent, may be risk

By JEAN ESPLIN Staff Writer

Great Scott! It's one of the difficult ski runs in Utah, according to Danny Richardson, director of marketing at Ski Utah. Great Scott at Snowbird is so difficult because it is so steep and narrow making it difficult and dangerous for skiers. This also makes it difficult to groom. The run also has different types of snow at different parts of the run, Richardson said.

Another difficult run in Utah is the Chute at Alta. It has some turns that can be difficult for the experienced skier, he said.

High Rustler, also at Alta, is difficult by the rocks along the run, he said.

A number of the runs at Alta Snowbird have been listed in Play magazine, Richardson said.

There are several challenging runs at Park City, according to Richardson, the assistant marketing director there.

They include the runs at the Jupiter Bowl chair lift, which is at about the 10,000 foot level, he said.

Portuguese Gap, in Scott's Bluffs, is also narrow with many moguls, he said.

In Puma Bowl, the Macho, steep and ungroomed, with maneuverability, she said.

There are three difficult runs at Solitude, according to Mike manager of the resort.

The Tube and Exit Chutes are steep and narrow, he said.

Holly's Haunt runs along the bottom and is filled in during snow years. It is not skied as much as the other runs at Solitude and not have as many moguls.

"Brianhead and Sundance also have runs they may consider difficult, they aren't known for their difficulty," Richardson said.

Utah has a different type of terrain than most other ski areas, he said. Snow storms usually come from the west from Washington and are wet and icy farther to the west places such as Lake Tahoe, and become fairly dry as they cross deserts to the west of Utah.

Best ski deal can stretch tight budget

By SHERIDAN R. HANSEN Senior Reporter

For skiers on a tight budget, it is important for them to stretch recreational dollars to their full extent.

By shopping around, it is possible to spend a day skiing on a modest budget.

Each ski area appeals to skiers in a variety of ways, depending on their skills and interests.

The average price of an all-day adult lift ticket among 13 ski areas in Utah is $14.

If the price is the only factor in determining where a person will ski, a Nordic Valley all-day lift ticket is $8, Nordic Valley, east of Ogden, has two double chairs and a verticle drop of 1,100 feet.

There are several other medium-sized Utah ski areas that offer good skiing at relatively modest rates.

Brighton Ski Area has all-day lift tickets for $9. The area has four double chairs with a 1,125 vertical drop.

Among the larger ski areas, lift ticket prices at Alta are the lowest. For the third consecutive year, an all day pass is $10 and a half-day pass is $7.50. Alta has eight double chairs and four tow ropes. The ski area vertical drop is 2,000 feet.

"We don't want to price the locals (local skiers) out of the skiing market. We have kept the prices so that everyone can ski," said Barbara Altum, secretary to the general manager at Alta.

Skiers interested in skiing other "big name" resorts can still find a bargain by taking advantage of the multiple-day tickets, season passes or coupon books.

Park City offers a discount on season passes sold to Utah residents (including out-of-state students attending a Utah university) to show appreciation for in-state skiers, according to Packy Longfellow, communications director for the Park City Ski Area.

A multi-area interchangeable voucher book, good for Park City, Park West, Deer Valley, Alta and Snowbird is sold in net passes where the skier can ski five times in a six day period for $105 or six times in seven days for $126. The voucher book and similar net passes sold for Park City skiing can save the skier from 10 to 15 percent.

Park West is selling coupon books until Nov. 20. The book has 10 coupons for $100, cutting the price of all-day lift passes down $6.

The season ticket plan at Snowbird, on sale until Dec. 15, can save the skier anywhere from $7 to $9.50 depending on the volume of tickets bought.

"This is our ninth year we have offered the season ticket plan to Utah skiers," said Gayle Cough, director of ticket sales at Snowbird.

Ski areas usually have lower rates in January and special deals for late spring.

Other ski values can be found during ski area bargain days, usually found at Brighton and Solitude.

After Jan. 1, Brighton will discount tickets for featured skiers on various days. Monday will be Lady's Day with $5 lift tickets and Lady's Night will be Wednesday night for $4. University Day is $5 on Thursdays and Men's Night is Saturday for $4. During Tuesday's Learn To Ski Night (4:30 to 10 p.m.), group lessons are $7 and lessons with equipment rental is $15.

Solitude will be having Monday Madness where all-day lift tickets are $5. University Day passes are $6 on Tuesdays, and Lady's Day will be Thursday for $6.

The Snowbird tram, Park City gondola, and the Brighton and Solitude interconnection lift also extend the slopes skiers can explore.

The new interconnection lift pass between Brighton and Solitude is $15 offering skiers the use of seven double chairs and two triple chairs.

Other area promotions include the new combination pass offered through Sundance. From 12:30 to 9:30 p.m. skiers can buy lift tickets for $9.

Best exhibits 'Liquid Light'

By VALERIE McCUNE
Staff Writer

"Light," a collection of paintings that two media of painting and photographed by artist John Weiss and is on throughout November in Gallery 303, assistant professor of design at BYU, using this method in 1976 while working in a dark room. Weiss discovered a discolored reverse print that had been with some toning agents in the light when the lights were turned on, he saw printed print was solarized and he produced interesting effects with the use of developer and fixers by pouring them across the paper surface. He then exposed the sheets to light a second time.

Later, Weiss used colored paper in the same manner.

In April of this year Weiss had his first major one-man show outside of BYU. Fifteen of his latest "Liquid Light Paintings" were shown in the Salt Lake Art Center. He currently has a display at the Friends of Photography Center in Carmel, Calif.

Concerning this display, Weiss said, "The gallery director was aware of several other artists who were exploring photographic chemicals in experimental photography, but he was aware of no one who was using the chemicals as a medium."

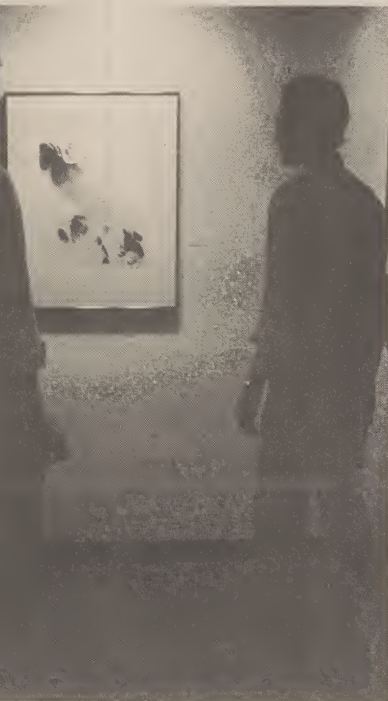

Weiss, who describes himself as a "non-photographer," received a BFA in painting from Oklahoma State University with an emphasis in abstract expressionism.

He has also received several research grants from BYU which have aided in his explorations of the "liquid light" method.

"Although I've been consistently producing these images for some time now," Weiss said, "I feel like I'm still really on the threshold. I haven't yet tried all the possibilities."

Gallery hours are Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

A reception honoring Weiss and his works will be given Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m.

Thinks himself a 'slob'

Baker surprised by award

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republican leader Howard Baker, shocked at being named the second-best dressed man in government, Wednesday confessed to his colleagues that "I am a slob."

The small Tennesseean said he has no taste in clothes and admitted his wife, Joy, makes him stand inspection in the morning before leaving her home.

Washington Post

Baker discovered his new honor in reading the Washington Post, which ran a brief item on a poll conducted by the Tailor's Council of America to determine the 10 best-dressed men in government and other fields.

President Reagan "barely" beat Baker as the best-dressed in government, with former vice president and Democratic presidential contender Walter Mondale in third place.

Big surprise

"I have had a lot of surprises in my life but never as big as the surprise which faced me this morning before breakfast when reading the Washington Post," Baker said at the start of the day's session.

Baker, dressed in a shapeless brown suit with his coat unbuttoned and his waist out front, told the Senate, "I want to say I have absolutely no taste in clothes."

"I have even known in my lifetime tailors and haberdashers to call me on the telephone and urge that I must come and choose a suit or they would send me one," he said.

"During the Watergate hearings, I was flooded with gifts of clothing because people were ashamed to see me representing the forces of light and reason in my chosen attire."

"I am a slob," Baker declared. "I am flattered in the extreme."

Baker said he began to wonder about the poll but then noticed some of the choices in other categories.

Other winners

"I noticed that they chose, in the category of motion picture films, John Travolta, who is almost always seen in a T-shirt," he said. Baker also mentioned Julius "Dr. J." Erving, winner in "the category of athletes, who is seldom seen by the American public except in his underwear."

"So it goes," the senator said. "That did take a little of the luster, burnish and polish away from this accolade."

'Anyone seen my contact lense?'

A BYU student strives for the form which denotes dance as an art. BYU offers many dance classes, but students pursuing this career should remember that only about the top 5 percent of professional dancers exist on their dance income alone, said John Mead, a member of the Repertory Dance Theater. Mead is on campus choreographing a number for a BYU dance production in January.

FLICK FLACK

The Daily Universe, under the title "Flick Flack," publishes synopses of movies shown in local theaters and on campus.

BRAINSTORM (PG)—This science fiction film groves human emotions and the life after death experience by using a device that can record thoughts and feelings. The movie veers off track occasionally, but in general is a thriller that will keep patrons on the edge of their seats. Violence, nudity, sex, profanity.

DEAD ZONE (R)—Christopher Walken and Martin Sheen star in this Stephen King story of a man who, revived from a five-year coma, finds himself with telepathic powers. It's episodic and uneven, but there are some fascinating scenes. Violence, profanity, nudity.

EDUCATING RITA (PG)—Michael Caine and Julie Walters star in this variation of a warmed-over "Pygmalion." A gentle comedy, with remarkable performances by the leads. Profanity.

FINAL TERROR (R)—Another "slasher" movie with more dead teenagers in the woods. Violence, profanity.

HADLEY'S REBELLION (PG)—Griffin O'Neal (Ryan O'Neal's son) is a Georgia teenager who becomes a wrestling champ in a California school. The movie lacks charm. Violence, profanity.

MR. MOM (PG)—This comedy stars Michael Keaton, forced to become a househusband, while his wife, Teri Garr, takes the role of a businesswoman. Predictable role switching situations, but fun. Profanity.

NEVER SAY NEVER AGAIN (PG)—Sean

Connery's return as James Bond is a wonderful, older characterization, with loads of great action sequences. A bit long, but the best Bond in some time. Violence, profanity, sex.

RICHARD PRYOR, HERE AND NOW (R)—Another concert film with Pryor taking control of the audience. Those who liked Pryor's other concert films will probably like this one. Profanity, vulgarity.

SUPERMAN III (PG)—Christopher Reeve is back with comic villain Richard Pryor in this film that doesn't measure up to the two earlier triumphs. Some funny scenes. Violence, profanity.

THE BIG CHILL (R)—A comedy-drama that brings together seven former 60s radicals for the funeral of a member of their group who commits suicide. A strong cast and powerful, thought-provoking drama. Sex, nudity, profanity.

THE CHOSEN (Varsity Theater)—Robby Benson stars in this film that deals with conflicts within the Jewish society. Based on the book by Chaim Potok.

THE WICKED LADY (R)—Faye Dunaway stars in this remake of the British 1945 costume drama about a society woman who becomes a thief. Violence, sex.

UNDER FIRE (R)—Nick Nolte and Gene Hackman star in this suspenseful film of journalistic ethics during the Nicaraguan revolution of 1979. Violence, sex, profanity.

WE OF THE NEVER NEVER (G)—This movie is an Australian frontier saga about a woman who travels to a cattle station and encounters prejudice against her and the aborigines in the area.

Snowmobiles can be fun, treacherous

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI)—Gliding along on a snowmobile, sweeping over a snowdrift at speeds of more than 60 mph will put a thrill in the drudgery of a long northern winter.

The sport is available to anyone in northern climates and mountains. Those who don't own a sled, can rent one at many resorts.

But the snowmobile can be dangerous, said Wayne Eller of the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, who supervises training courses for youngsters.

In Minnesota, young people ages 12 to 17 are required to take a course in operating snowmobiles if they wish to drive the motorized sleds on public lands. No instruction is required on private land.

"Not paying attention to where you are going," said Eller, "is the most dangerous aspect of snowmobiling. We teach people to watch out for culverts and fences, especially at night."

That simple advice is frequently overlooked, even by adults.

"We have most of our problems at night, when the operator can't see," Eller said.

He advises snowmobilers to go along with someone who knows the trail.

Bruce Rushton, a vice president for a major snowmobile manufacturer, said a key factor in safety is making sure the machine is in proper working order before the season begins.

"Before you start, you should give the sled a proper check. Check the brakes and throttle. Check the suspension and skis. Make sure the lights work," Rushton said.

"The snowmobile is a very powerful toy. It should be treated as a motorcycle or a sportscar. Even our smallest one is capable of speeds over 60 mph."

Rushton said a snowmobiler should be careful in running a snowmobile across a lake or along a stream.

"You can have thin ice any time of the year under the wrong snow conditions," he said. "If you are not familiar with the lake, you should look to local advice."

"If the snow comes too early and too thick, the cold doesn't freeze the water. You end up with green ice. That is actually the sun reflecting on the water. At night, it is almost impossible to spot bad ice, until you are in the middle of it."

Breaking through thin ice with a snowmobile is more serious than falling in the water while ice skating. The speed of a snowmobile will put the driver several hundred feet into open water.

Rushton said riding a snowmobile in the mountains poses another hazard. Glare from the sun can keep a person from seeing deep gullies or crevasses.

"That's why I think a snowmobile trail system is a great deal. It allows strangers to ride on without worrying."

Although all snowmobiles have various safety devices, Eller said snowmobiles should have some kind of automatic kill switch. A cord tied to the coat of the driver is the best, he said. If the snowmobiler falls off the machine, the cord will pull out a switch and stop the sled.

"Some fishing clubs require that for their boats," Eller said. "In my opinion, all snowmobiles should have the same kind of emergency kill switch."

Class could be canceled

Physical Education 381R may not be taught winter semester, according to Tom Murdock, public relations director of the ballroom dance team at BYU.

Because 381R is an advanced course, not many students sign up for it, he said. "If enrollment continues to decline the class will have to be canceled."

Many students don't like to take classes taught in the Knight Magnus Building, but prefer classes

Ernest L. Wilkinson Center, Wakefield, director of the ballroom dance team.

According to the Dance Department, is trying to move social classes now taught in the Knight Magnus Building to make them more attractive to students, he said.

Wakefield said if the course were canceled it will be taught once during fall semester.

Y comedy staged at Playhouse

"See How They Run," the BYU production of Philip King's farcical comedy, opened at the Promised Valley Playhouse in Salt Lake City, Thursday.

"See How They Run," a British comedy of mistaken identities, opened the Parode Drama Theater season in September and sold out consistently in all but the first few performances of its three week extended run. Under the direction of Charles L. Metten, the show will now run in Salt Lake City until Nov. 12.

Metten, a professor of theater and cinematic arts, said the play has retained its original cast, set, costumes and director. The cast includes Kim Jensen, Chris Utley and Rick Rinaldi. The set, a realistic interior of an old English vicarage, was designed by Charles A. Henson, a professor of theater and cinematic arts.

"See How They Run," will run tonight through Nov. 12 at 7:30 p.m., with 2 p.m. matinees on Nov. 5 and 12.

Tickets are available from the Promised Valley Playhouse box office, and ZCMI ticket outlets.

is also looking at an opportunity to use the Creep railroad tracks to provide train access to the Sundance and Park City ski resorts, he said. There are also plans for a possible train depot at Osmond Studios.

City officials have talked about using residual funds that exist after the building of a new municipal golf course to build another 18-hole course in the canyon.

However, there has been opposition to the plan, particularly from City Councilman Keith Roos, who said the money could be better spent. "I feel that funds available after the course's completion should be used for economic development," said Roos.

At Tuesday's city council meeting, council members accepted a trust fund to finance the building of the new municipal golf course, with an amendment that they would "determine the use of any residual funds." This will permit the council to determine whether a course in the canyon is necessary when residual funds become available.

Provo businesses plan for openings

By KEITH WITOUT
Staff Writer

Official ribbon-cutting ceremonies for 15 businesses in the Provo Town Square mall complex will take place Friday.

The ceremonies, which will begin at 11 a.m., will mark the first time that 15 businesses have opened the same day in Provo, according to Kevin Lambert, executive vice president of the Provo Chamber of Commerce.

Most of the businesses are already open, but the ribbon-cutting ceremonies will symbolize their official openings, said Kevin Mortensen, leasing agent for Provo Town Square.

The mall is located at the corner of Center Street and University Avenue and is comprised of 12 renovated historic buildings.
